Kritch Rules:

Two players (the throwers) throw the red ball between them, underarm. They have to be at least ten steps apart, and they are not allowed to move.

The one throwing the seeds (the shooter) has to try and hit the red ball in mid-air, deflecting it away from the receiving thrower. A smaller, different-coloured ball can be used in place of seeds. The shooter is allowed to move, but has to be at least ten paces away from either thrower.

The throwers throw the ball underarm twenty times between them, and the shooter gets a point every time this ball hits the floor. The shooter, of course, will try to deflect the ball in midair. Then the players swap until everyone has been shooter.
